Sea Views and private beach

The main house features 3 large bedrooms and three huge bathrooms, all with whirlpool tubs and separate showers. An 8' by 20' second floor balcony provides sweeping views of the sea with a continuing parade of ships entering Curacao's famous harbor. The cloud covered mountains of Venezuela dot the distant horizon. The large kitchen features a gas "chefs stove" and all modern appliances. The 21' x 15' dining area is covered by old, Dutch tiles, sent to the Island as ballast in sailing ships. A large entry- way and living room feature high ceilings and a media room is located just off this foyer. Many extras add a special character to this Dutch "landhuis" style home dating to the 1700's.

The freshwater pool combines a 50' x 10' lap pool with a 10' x 12' passage under an arched bridge to a 21' circular "gathering pool" with underwater seating and a fountain. At the end of the lap pool a 14' x 14' gazebo, roofed in Dutch tiles, provides shade for lounge chairs or dining. An additional gazebo adds a pleasant retreat next to the sea and palm lined beach area.

The 18' x 17' pool house contains the mechanical room, a storage room for pool toys, air mattresses, diving equipment and lounge cushions, and a full bath with huge shower, toilet room, sink and dressing area. An outdoor shower provides a convenient facility for removing beach sand from the "little ones."

Attached to the main house by an archway that conceals a gutter used in the past to carry rainwater to the cistern, is a maid's house. This features a complete kitchen, living room, bath and loft bedroom as well as an additional sleeping area and its own front covered patio.

Connected to the main house on the other side by a beautiful arch is the former cistern building, now "his" and "hers" offices. His (if he is a good negotiator) is 20' x 40' with track lighting, beautiful artwork and the interesting texture of 300 year old walls. Hidden below a secret floor panel is a similar sized wine cellar or storage area. Hers is 14' x 10' with pine flooring, track lighting, artwork and conversation area. Both offices have two-line phone service, broadband Internet connection,
